It is the latest investment made by Razorback Athletics in an effort to maintain nationally competitive women's and men's golf programs at the University of Arkansas.
- "The tremendous success that our men's and women's golf programs have enjoyed in the past decade and a half is directly attributable to the leadership of Shauna Taylor and Brad McMakin," Vice Chancellor and Director of Athletics Hunter Yurachek said. "The consistent excellence of both our men's and women's programs has firmly established the University of Arkansas as one of the prime destinations for collegiate golf. Few programs in the country are fortunate to have two long-time coaches who have continued to raise the bar of success, even while competing in the premier conference in the nation. I have no doubt that Shauna and Brad will continue to lead our teams to competitive success, while also investing in the lives of the student-athletes they coach."
- Taylor and McMakin both signed new five-year agreements that run from September 2022 to June 2027 and include incentive-based salary increases and agreement extensions based on NCAA Tournament appearances. Additional incentive payments will be based on success in the SEC and the NCAA Tournament and graduation of their respective student-athletes.
